Worth Knowing About India Rugs.

So little has been said about India rugs that very few people realize or appreciate their valuable points.

So far as duration is concerned they rival the Oriental. Every tuft or strand of wool is tied in: they are hand made the same as Oriental; only vegetable dyes are used, which vie with time to fade them. Not only de they come in the deep, rich Egyptian shades, but in delicate pastel this as well. A representative from one of the largest importing firms has been with the Walker Store for several days taking fall orders, but a very good assortment was brought along to go into the spring stock. Rugs are made in all sizes—for hall, office, den or room. The India rug strikes a happy price medium in not being so expensive as the Oriental. Yet in goodness, beauty and serviceableness is conceded to be its equal. Worth Knowing About India Rugs.
